ShareLife

"Living the Gospel" by helping newcomers to Canada...

Angie moved to Canada to marry a man she met online. He was not who he seemed; she endured emotional and physical abuse. While he was at work, she started attending language classes at Catholic Crosscultural Services. Staff at CCS connected her with a settlement worker in the women's program. Angie received the support she needed to exit her violent relationship and live independently, free from abuse. Angie is one of over 3,000 clients helped annually by CCS programs funded by ShareLife.

The Divine Worker of Nazareth

We live in an age that has clearly lost the deeper understanding of the Christian meaning of work; that work, redeemed by and joined to the work of the Lord Jesus Christ, is filled with dignity and redemptive value! This dehumanizing detachment of work from its true value - and the separation of its place as an intricate part of the deeper meaning and purpose of our lives - is not a new problem. It is a part of a larger social and individual malady. It is one of the bad fruits of the rupture of human integrity and solidarity wrought by sin, the rejection of God and His purpose in our lives.

John Paul the Great emphasized the need for all human work to be rescued "from the logic of profit, from the lack of solidarity, from the fever of earning ever more, from the desire to accumulate and consume." He rightly insisted that when the focus of work becomes solely the accumulation of what he called "inhuman wealth" it can become a "seductive and merciless idol." That rescue will only occur, he insisted, when we "return to the austere words of the Divine Master: 'For what does it profit a man if he gains the whole world and loses or forfeits himself?'" Finally, he reminded the assembly that Jesus, whom he called The Divine Worker of Nazareth, reminds us that "life is more than food and that work is for man, not man for work. What makes a life great is not the entity of gain, nor the type of profession, or the level of the career. Man is worth infinitely more than the goods he produces or possesses."

Tradition concerning the true meaning of human work (2427) "Human work proceeds directly from persons created in the image of God and called to prolong the work of creation by subduing the earth, both with and for one another. Hence work is a duty: "If any one will not work, let him not eat." Work honors the Creator's gifts and the talents received from him.

Everyone should be able to draw from work the means of providing for his life and that of his family, and of serving the human community. The primordial value of labor stems from man himself, its author and beneficiary. By means of his labor man participates in the work of creation. Work united to Christ can be redemptive." (CC 2460). ~ From: Christians, the Gospel of Work and International Workers Day by Deacon Keith Fournier - Catholic Online
